

President Gives Assent to 24th Amendment Bill

NEW DELHI, Nov. 5. President Mr. V. V. Giri today gave his assent to the Constitution (Twentyfourth) Amendment Bill, which seeks to restore to Parliament its power to modify any part of the Constitution, including fundamental rights.

The Government had undertaken this legislation to get over the difficulty created by the Supreme Court's judgment in the Golaknath case.

By this judgment, delivered by a majority of six to five, the Supreme Court opined that Parliament had no right to modify chapter three, embodying the fundamental rights. It could amend other parts of the Constitution.

The Bill, which sought to reconstruct Article 368 of the Constitution dealing with the procedure for constitutional amendments, itself required endorsement by not less than 50 per cent of the State legislatures, besides being passed by a special majority in Parliament.

Having received such endorsement, the Union Law Ministry forwarded the Bill to the President for his consent.

The President's consent clears the way for the consideration of the Constitution (Twentyfifth) Amendment Bill which seeks to make drastic changes in Article 31 relating to property rights in order to enable expedient socio-economic changes.

Firstly, the word "compensation" is sought to be replaced by "amount" so as to make the quantum of payment for take-over of property for public purpose really non-justiciable.

It would not be possible after the enactment of the measure for the courts to declare payment of market value for such take-over as they have done in several instances earlier. Any amount determined by the legislature, State or Central, in cases of take-over would be final.

Senate Committee Revives Foreign Aid Bill

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted last night to revive the Foreign Aid Bill that the Senate killed last Friday, but with 40 per cent less money than the Administration wanted.

The White House quickly branded the Committee's proposal inadequate. "We are not satisfied with that level," said the Press Secretary, Mr. Ronald L. Ziegler.

In a series of 14 roll-call votes most of them extremely close, members divided their revived foreign aid programme into two separate Bills—one for economic assistance and one for military assistance.

Then they sent the two proposals to the floor for consideration. Money in the two Bills totals $2.3 billion, as against the $3.6 billion the Administration requested for the fiscal year that began on July 1.

Especially objecting to cuts in "security assistance to South-East Asia," Mr. Ziegler said that "we have every hope that the Senate will restore amounts necessary to maintain a comprehensive and balanced foreign assistance programme."

FOREIGN AID AS FOREIGN PACKAGE

A spokesman for the Secretary of State, Mr. William Rogers said earlier that the Secretary, who appeared before the Committee yesterday, felt the current aid programme should continue until a sensible and balanced reform package was produced.

"The Secretary believes it is not possible to handle (foreign aid) on what amounts to a cut and paste basis," the spokesman said.

The Administration's strategy was to seek passage of foreign aid as a unified (foreign aid) package, the general support for technical assistance and relief to East Bengal refugees would gain the votes of Senators opposed to military aid.

One Senate source said that at least 40 of the 100 Senators were likely to vote against military aid as a separate package.

Rising Senate opposition to providing weapons for such governments as Greece and Brazil, along with concern over deeper American involvement in Indo-China, particularly Cambodia, led many liberals to join traditional conservative opponents of foreign aid to defeat the Administration Bill by 41 to 27 votes on Friday night.

SENATORS' FEARS

In an obvious comment on fears by some Senators that U.S. assistance to Cambodia might deepen American involvement in Indo-China, State Department spokesman, Charles Bray said that Mr. Rogers had reassured the Committee that the Administration had no intention of becoming more deeply involved in Cambodia.

Asked why some Senators did not believe this, Mr. Bray said, "Part of it is historical. When they think back over the last decade and our experience in Vietnam, they believe that people inevitably follow money."

Consideration of the two measures is expected to begin early next week.

The Bill which allocates $1,114 millions for economic and humanitarian aid, has a provision of $250 millions (Rs. 187.5 crores) for East Bengal refugees in India.

A joint House-Senate conference committee yesterday approved a controversial end-of-the-war proposal declaring that it is the policy of the United States to totally withdraw from Indo-China.

But the committee deleted from the Senate version of a $21,000 millions Defence Procurement Bill a proposal that U.S. forces withdraw from Indo-China within six months subject to the release of all American prisoners.

Mr. Edward Hebert (Democrat, Louisiana), chairman of the conference committee, said that the elimination of the time-table would keep the hands of President Nixon free in his efforts to end U.S. involvement in Indo-China.

Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield, author of the amendment, said he would make another attempt to pass his original amendment by adding it to other legislation.

The Defence Procurement Bill has still to go back to the House of Representatives and the Senate for their final approval. The conference committee consists mainly of hawkish members of the Armed Services Committee of both Houses.—UPI, Reuter and AP.

The appeal came from the Police Commissioner following a tragic incident in which a 25-year-old woman of Ayanavaram was burnt to death when her nylon saree caught fire in a stove burst. Her husband sustained burns when he attempted to save his wife.

Small Papers Exempt from Excise Levy

FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

NEW DELHI, Nov. 5. Newspapers and periodicals which have a circulation of less than 15,000 per publishing day have been exempted from the proposed Central excise levy on newspapers and other printed periodicals.

A notification to this effect has been issued by the Finance Ministry today in pursuance of the assurances given by the Finance Minister, Mr. Y. B. Chavan, to a delegation representing small newspapers' interest which met him earlier this week.

The explanation in the notification says that "average circulation" in relation to the newspaper or the case may be of printed periodical, means the average number of copies sold and includes copies distributed free per publishing day, calculated on the basis of the total number of days of publication during a calendar year and where such newspaper or periodical is published from more than one place the average circulation shall be the aggregate of average circulation of such newspaper or periodicals published from each such place of publication.

By another notification newspapers and periodicals which are not ordinarily intended for sale have also been exempted from the proposed excise levy.

The notification says that exemption from levy will be allowed provided an officer not below the rank of an Assistant Collector of Central Excise is satisfied that such newspapers or printed periodicals are not ordinarily intended for sale.

As in the case of other excisable commodities, newspapers and periodicals will be eligible for rebate of excise duty on export.

These exemptions will come into force from November 15 on the date when the proposed levy becomes effective.

Convicted for Selling Varnish Without Licence

MADRAS, Nov. 5. The Sixth Presidency Magistrate, Saidapet, on November 2, convicted a woman, Mangamma Chettiar, on charges of selling varnish without a valid licence or permit.

Special Police Party under the supervision of the Deputy Commissioner of Police (South Law and Order) arrested the accused on October 30 and seized about 95 litres of varnish from him. A case under Section 58 (A) of Tamil Nadu Abkari Ordinance Act 8 of 1971 was registered in this connection.

At Kodambakkam, on October 30, the special police party arrested a woman, Jaya, for having sold brandy without a valid licence. The 100 ml. of brandy was also seized from her. The case is under investigation.

Evidence in Election Cases: Court's Ruling

MADRAS, Nov. 5. The Madras High Court, disposing of a writ petition, said no court could compel a person to disclose his choice of participation in an election, and eminent authors on elections had always held the view that witnesses might be called in but they should not be asked for whom they had voted.

Mr. Justice T. Ramaprasada Rao dismissed a petition questioning the setting aside of the election of the Tamil Nadu Legislative Assembly. In the election to the post of chairman of the Ambasamudram Panchayat Union Council held in August 1970, the petitioner secured 8 votes while his opponent got 7. There was then a controversy as to whether the local M.L.A. was competent to be a member of the council and participate in the election.

By an interlocutory order, the then M.L.A. was allowed to vote but ultimately it was decided that he should not contest the election. The rival candidate, filed a petition before the District Munsif (Election Commission), contending that the franchise exercised by the M.L.A. was illegal.

The result of the election, the Election Commission set aside the election and directed a re-election, against this was the present petition. The petitioner, who was the respondent and asked to state as to whom he had voted for, that not having secured 8 votes, the conclusion of the Election Commission was wrong.

His Lordship said under Rule 12 of the disputes relating to Panchayat and Panchayat Union Council elections, the Election Court should declare whether the election of the returned candidate was valid or not. In this case, the Court had found that the result of the election had been materially affected by the improper reception of a vote and hence had held the election to be void.

After having done so, ordered a fresh election. It was mandatory for the Court to order a fresh election if it was not possible to do so. The petitioner, who had been duly elected and the Court had done this. Also, in the peculiar circumstances of the case where there was an equality of votes, the conclusion of the Court was not a matter of fact, but a matter of law.

AP Students to Intensify Strike

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT

VIJAYAWADA, Nov. 5. The students of colleges in the Andhra and Sri Venkateswara University areas "will continue and intensify the strike" in view of the "unhelpful attitude" of Chief Minister, according to a statement issued by Mr. A. V. Ratnam, Chairman, Joint Action Committee, here today.

The students of 70 of about 90 degree colleges in the two university areas have been on strike from November 1.

"C.M. UNHELPFUL"

The statement issued by the Chairman of the Action Committee said "It is unfortunate that the Chief Minister, Mr. P. V. Narasimha Rao has tried to shift the blame on to the universities instead of meeting the representatives of the students and making serious efforts to help them solve their problems. His unhelpful attitude has only created a situation in which the students are left with no choice except to continue and intensify the strike until their demands are conceded."

The students demand that colleges taking donations for admission of such needy or poor students be disaffiliated by the universities, that examinations be held at the end of every year and that the choice of medium of instruction be left to the students.

The Chief Minister had told the press at Hyderabad on Wednesday that it was for the universities to act on the demands of the students.

The student-leaders are meeting here on November 7 to review the strike situation.

Talks to End Kerala Teachers' Strike

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT

TRIVANDRUM, Nov. 5. A three-member committee was appointed by the joint meeting of the KPCC (R) and Legislature Congress Party executives here today to bring about an early settlement of the State-wide private college teachers' strike. The committee consists of Messrs. K. Karunakaran, Home Minister, C. M. Stephen, M.P. and A. K. Antony, KPCC General Secretary.

Briefing pressmen, Mr. Antony said that the committee would have talks with the Government and representatives of the striking teachers.

He said that several proposals for resolving the deadlock were considered at the meeting, but declined to disclose them as he feared it might prejudice the negotiations.

Asked whether the Youth Congress representatives had raised the issue of taking action against Mr. R. Sankar, former Chief Minister, Mr. Antony's reply was: "The discussions are still going on." (The Youth Congress leaders had told pressmen yesterday that they would press for action against Mr. Sankar on the ground that his actions and statements ran counter to the party's policies).

Steel Cabinets Broken Open in Rail Bhavan

NEW DELHI, Nov. 5. Two steel cabinets and four drawers, the keys of which are still in possession of the former Chairman of the Railway Board Mr. B. C. Ganguli were broken open in the Railway Bhavan today in the presence of a sub-divisional magistrate of Delhi and other witnesses.

About 50 files, most of them containing confidential records of senior railways officials and two personal files of Mr. Ganguli were all that were found in these cabinets and drawers. "No money was recovered, not even a single naya paisa", an official spokesman of the Railway Ministry, was among the witnesses who signed the inventory told pressmen later.

Genocide of Bengalis—Military Regime's Final Solution

By Anthony Mascarenhas

On March 1, 1971 the bomb fell on Bangladesh. It was more shattering than Hiroshima.

Going on the air at an unusual hour was a statement by President Yahya Khan announcing postponement of the session of the National Assembly, scheduled to meet for the first time two days later. The statement was a jumble of argument, prayers to Allah and appeals in the name of the father of the nation. But it set no new day for the assembly meeting.

It didn't matter to the stunned Bengalis. All they could think of was that West Pakistan had broken faith again. This was the supreme act of treachery, the end of the line, a declaration of war—call it what you will, the sentiment was the same: Bangladesh would have to seek a separate destiny. West Pakistan wanted it that way.

Bangladesh was born that day in the hearts of its angry people.

MUJIB'S FOLLY

On March 3, Mujibur Rahman called a province-wide strike and launched a non-violent non-cooperation movement. The upsurge, by then had spread to the other parts of the province. The Awami League's grip on the situation tightened as the non-cooperation spread and the province was shut down by a series of crippling strikes.

As the intensity of the movement increased, so did the demand for independence. Soon all eyes were being turned to the racecourse at Dhaka, where Sheikh Mujib was expected to proclaim independence on March 7. Had the Awami League chief been true to his deserved reputation as a revolutionary leader of the masses, he would have led the million-strong crowd which gathered that day to Eastern Command Headquarters four miles away and demanded and received Tikka Khan's surrender. The people were in the mood for it and would have gladly sacrificed the lives of a few hundred to overwhelm the army. Bangladesh would have been a reality at a minimum cost—certainly a million would not have subsequently died, and countless others made homeless by military brutality.

It would not be the only time that Mujibur Rahman and the Awami League would fail to rise to the occasion by a curious blindness to reality. Despite the painful evidence accumulating before their eyes and ears he and his associates allowed themselves to be lulled by Yahya Khan into a mad hatter's dance of "negotiations on constitutional formulas" and finally led like sheep to the slaughter. On March 25, while Yahya Khan was flying back to Karachi after giving the ultimatum order and West Pakistani forces were taking up positions for the slaughter in Dhaka and Chittagong, an Awami League messenger was handing local and foreign newspapermen the western wing release by Sheikh Mujib. "Our talks with the President are over. We have reached agreement on the transfer of power and I hope the President will now make the announcement" (The exclamation is mine. I have no other comment on this folly).

The negotiations were a farce and not worth recounting. They were never meant to succeed. The taking of Tikka Khan and the army that additional margin of time they needed to bring in reinforcements from the western wing.

The most notable feature was the fact that they never broke down. The end came with the military action on the night of March 25, Sheikh Mujib was strung along to the last. Even while the President was flying back to Karachi he was led to believe there was a prospect of settlement.

UNSIGNED MESSAGE

At about 8 p.m. on March 25, 1971, an unidentified cycle rickshaw hastily pulled into the lane leading to 32 Dharmamandir and came to a halt outside Sheikh Mujibur Rahman's Dacca residence. The driver was coughing and out of breath. He said he had pedalled all the way from the cantonment with an "urgent chit" for Bangla Bandhu. The unsigned message in Bengali was terse: "Your house is going to be raided to-night."

One of those present on the occasion told me it was the first hard news they received of the impending action by the West Pakistan army. The army went into action moments after the Eastern Command Headquarters had received the signal of the President's safe arrival in Karachi. That was Edward Kennedy and Mr. Nelson Rockefeller, Governor of New York, besides top officials of the State Department. He is also scheduled to call on U Thant, the U.N. Secretary-General.

Giving details of his programme, Mr. Karunanidhi told a press conference today that his talks with the world Bank chief would be a continuation of the discussions he and his Cabinet colleagues had with him in Madras two years ago on the numerous irrigation and agricultural development schemes for which the Bank aid had been sought.

The Chief Minister said he would take the opportunity of his about 11.30 p.m. By midnight the troops were well into their terrible task.

Gradually the pattern of the killings began to emerge. Horrified Bengalis suddenly became aware that the West Pakistani army had launched a campaign of genocide in East Bengal. The systematic pattern of the murders throughout the province matches exactly the dictionary definition of genocide. I was to learn later by my visit to the 14th Division Headquarters at Comilla with what bestiality and thoroughness the campaign had been planned and was being executed.

There is no doubt whatsoever about the targets of the genocide. They were: (1) The Bengali militarymen of the East Bengal Regiment, the East Pakistan Rifles, police and para-military Ansars and Mujibids. (2) The Hindus. (3) The Awami Leaguers—all office bearers and volunteers down to the lowest link in the chain of command. (4) The students of Bengali and university boys and some of the more militant girls and (5) Bengali intellectuals such as professors and teachers whenever damaged by during my visit to the East Bengal problem. Not since Hitler has there been anything so diabolical.

ARMY'S BRUTALITY

The army's brutality in East Bengal cannot find excuse, as some government spokesmen contend, in "justifiable retaliatory action" against mutinous Bengalis to preserve the integrity of the unit. Nor can the killings of the non-Bengalis ever be justified by the army genocide. The evidence has established four things. First, the military action by West Pakistan preceded, not followed the massacre of non-Bengalis. Secondly, an "imminent mutiny" of the Bengali servicemen, as some of us were made to believe, was not planned for March 26 and is therefore no justification for the supposedly "pre-emptive strike" of the night before.

Thirdly, the wasteful pogroms were intended, in the context of the ambitions of the present West Pakistani regime, as a military answer to what was essentially a political problem of its own making. Fourth, the obliteration of Bengali language and culture is the continuing purpose of the regime.

This is the reality of the rape of Bangladesh. Not all the propaganda in the world can hide it.
