Congress Principle Of

Non-Coercion

NEW DELHI, June 4.

THE Viceroy, addressing a Press conference this morning, asserted that Britain meant to quit, and said. I mean it sincerely when I say power will be transferred as completely this year as it ever would have been by June, 1918. I am sincere. I am not bluffing."

The Vicercy answered questions for nearly two hours and a quarter.

The conference was held in the Constituent Assembly Hall, and Sardar Vallabibhat Patel, Infarmation Member, conducted the proceedings. Lord Ismay, Sir Eric Miewille and Mr. V. P. Menon were also present.

The Vicercy reasserted that the British would eave when they were told to leave. They were here just to assist the parties, and nothing mars.

The Vicercy at the outest before the conducted the parties and step of the parties and nothing mars and the parties and nothing mars and the conducted the parties and nothing mars and not suppose the suppose the parties and nothing mars and nothing mars more.

The Viceroy, at the outset, briefty reviewed the events that had led to the announcement last night, and said that partition had not yet been effocted. It was entirely a matter for the people to decide.

INDIAN STATES' FUTURE

for the people to decide.

INDIAN STATES' FUTURE

The Indian States cannot enter separately as Dominions", replied the Viceroy to a question on the future of the Indian States, Further elaborating the point, Lord Mountbatten oxplained that, with the lapse of Papumountey, the States would be free agents either to enter the Constitution of the Indian States came to him asking for a separate treaty—conomic or military—with H. LONDON TALKS

Lord Mounthatten, explaining the background to the plan, said that before he came out to India he before he came out to India he held some preliminary discussions in London and it was settled that he would spend the first six months in becoming acquainted with the problem and the first six months in becoming acquainted with the problem and the first six months in becoming acquainted with the problem and the first six months in becoming acquainted with the problem and the course, to prepare the nacessary legistation carly in 1948 in Parliament. When the arrived out here, however, the discovered, almost at once, that the one point on which Levy community was agreed, and which all the he decision at the carllest possible moment on how to transfer power was a prime accessity if they were to arrost the deteriorating communal stitle and tension and bring back an era of peace and friendliness without which no proper set to work, seeing as many people as possible first of all getting background material and asking for their views. His views he had publistly expressed. Inst night on the question of a unified India.
